MAY 12: UD LAW SCHOOL TO AWARD 138 DEGREES AT GRADUATION

The University of Dayton School of Law will award degrees to 138 graduates on Saturday, May 12, at 2 p.m. in UD Arena. U.S. District Judge Walter H. Rice will be the guest speaker at the ceremony.

The graduating class contains some exceptional students...

IT WAS 'LOVE AT FIRST SIGHT' FOR TWO LAW SCHOOL GRADS

David Marquis and Ann Oehlerts met during their first days of law school at the University of Dayton. "We had our first date that first week, and it was love at first sight," said Oehlerts. This weekend will mean more than graduation for them--the couple will welcome 100 guests to their wedding Friday evening at Polen Farm.

With parents, grandparents, brothers and sisters coming from Atlanta and Boston for the graduation ceremony, "We thought this weekend would be perfect for our wedding, too," said Oehlerts.

The couple will take Sunday off before embarking on their nine-day honeymoon to Antigua. "Then we'll come back to Dayton and start studying for the Ohio bar," Oehlerts said, adding that Marquis has received a job offer from a Miamisburg law firm.

LAW STUDENT NEVER THREW IN THE TOWEL, ENDS UP AS EDITOR OF LAW REVIEW

Robert Windus was admitted to the University of Dayton School of Law on a qualified basis--if he could be successful in a summer program, he would be allowed to continue. From such marginal beginnings, he wound up as editor-in-chief of the UD Law Review.

"There were 60 of us in the summer program," remembers Windus, "and 11 of us made it through and gained admission."

He was selected as editor of the publication at the end of his second year of law school. "It's a unique experience," said Windus. "You're put in a position where you have to manage people and you're responsible for awarding or denying (academic) credit. So you learn a lot of management techniques as well as the more scholarly pursuits of writing skills and legal analysis."

Windus returned for his law degree after four years as an engineer in Washington, D.C., reasoning that the degree would be good background for an executive position with a general contractor or large construction company. His plans have changed. He now intends to practice construction law and has received a job offer from a Washington, D.C. firm.

For media interviews, contact Robert Windus at (513) 298-7957 or 229-3642.
